In September 2016, the Fine-Art Photography Association (FAPA) will hold the third Daikanyama Photo Fair. The Japanese galleries, bookstores, and publishers that have supported the fair since its inception will be joined by leading figures in fine art photography from around the world to exhibit a carefully selected presentation of art photography. Alongside the fair, FAPA will also launch a new exhibition series, The Photobook, to provide a comprehensive introduction to Japanese photobooks, a genre which, from a global perspective, has maintained a distinctive trend since the 1960s. Public programs associated with the fair include lecture and talk sessions by curators from international art museums, enabling participants to learn from the exhibitions about the remarkable photographers of the past, and to consider the present and future of fine art photography. FAPA is delighted to be able to present this marvelous opportunity to discover the tremendous creativity of art photography.

About FAPA (Fine-Art Photography Association)

The Fine-Art Photography Association (FAPA) was founded in December 2013 to establish and promote the photographic arts and visual culture in general and Japanese fine art photography in particular. To realize these aims, FAPA will foster and support young photographers and help Japanese photographers, and the educational programs they operate, achieve better international recognition. FAPA, as a general incorporated association operated by galleries, publishers, and booksellers that handle fine art photography, started its activity in 2014.
